A Special Note from Pastor Minnix:

St. Paul, when speaking of the church and the unity we have with one another writes, “If one member suffers, all suffer together; if one member is honored, all rejoice together.” Congregations demonstrate this in so many different ways. Yet, it is often in times that are “common” to the body. In other words, we support those who grieve – we care for those who are sick. These things we do well. In recent days, many have learned that our brother Glenn Schabel and family have entered a time of great distress. For many of us, it might feel like a very different kind of time. But the words of God, through St. Paul, remain true. “When one member suffers, all suffer together”. Today we are called to do nothing more and be nothing more than we have always been; namely, a faith community which understands that God has placed us in community together for mutual support and consolation. Let us continue to do these things well, as we seek to support the Schabel family in every way possible. Blessings to you St. Luke, as we honor one another; for through Christ’s death and resurrection, we have all been made honorable and presentable to God.
